GANG SHOOT-OUT IN POSSIL PARK

It has come to this reporters' attention that, yet again, there has been trouble in the Possil Park area of Glasgow. This troubled area has recently seen a rise in crime and in the number of gangs supposedly operating in the area as well as an increase in violent crime.

A source, who will remain nameless, has reported that the Police are investigating a shoot out may have occurred in that area a number of weeks ago.

The police have issued a statement asking for witness to come forward and they would like to assure everyone that their anonymity will be guaranteed. However, their investigations have been hampered by the lack of mortal press uptake on this story.

PARTY BIG GUNS IN FINAL POLL PUSH

With only a few days to go before the Holyrood election the Labour and Tory big guns have rolled into Scotland.

Chancellor Gordon Brown appealed to Labour's traditional grass roots support to "come home" to the party.

And voters were responding to a Tory campaign which had promised "delivery, not divorce," according to party leader David Cameron.

Mr Brown claimed there was all still to play for, because of an unusually high number of undecided voters.

He was joined by First Minister Jack McConnell at the Adam Smith College in Kirkcaldy.

Mr Brown made a plea for "Labour voters to come home to Labour" on four separate occasions during an address to students and young party activists.

Mr McConnell said Thursday presented "a momentous election and enormous choice" for Scots.

"This is the closest election in Scotland for a generation and the votes young Scots will make on Thursday will matter more than they've ever mattered before," he added.

Meanwhile, Mr Cameron went on a walk-about in Glasgow with Scots Tory leader Annabel Goldie and a group of supporters.

After strolling along the city's Buchanan Street, he said: "People are interested to meet the Conservatives, want to hear from us, and we got a very good reception with a lot of people saying they are going to vote Conservative, some for the first time."

Mr Cameron went on: "We are the people who fought the strong, positive campaign.

"Annabel has been campaigning on the issues that matter - drugs, affordable housing and getting crime down.

"That is what people want - delivery, not divorce."

CALEDONIA NOCTURNUS 2007

The Anarchs are getting together to discuss the war with the Sabbat in the US. They've picked somewhere sparsely populated with kindred where no one can disturb them. There will be representatives from all along the American east coast and the rest of the world. This is a War Council. At the end of the meeting there should be a plan on how the Anarchs, and hopefully the Camarilla, will deal with the Sabbat incursion.
